Bottom line: Chinese President Xi's visit to Washington concluded Friday. Low market expectations leading into the event proved warranted, as concrete deliverables were limited primarily to a two-month extension of the "trade truce" and a potential "AI hotline". Deeper underlying tensions remain, though both presidents arguably have incentives to keep the relationship on the rails in the near term.

Main points:

1. US President Trump hosted Chinese President Xi in Washington on September 23-25. The summit featured diplomatic pomp beyond the traditional state visit, including Trump's welcome of the visiting leader at the airport (an honor not afforded to Trump in Beijing in his prior visits). The leaders held meetings on Thursday, September 24, a state dinner that evening, and then tea with spouses on the 25th, among other events.

2. As usual, the diplomatic readouts of the two countries differed in emphasis. The US readout began with cooperation on fentanyl controls with China, as well as Trump's request that China "increase production of refined petroleum products to stabilize global supply". China's readout did mention the drug enforcement cooperation, but led with its formulation of a "constructive China-U.S. relationship of strategic stability".

3. The most substantive deliverables were:

- A two-month extension of the "trade truce" (agreed last October in Busan) from November to January 2027.
- Launch of the "Board of Trade" (with recommendations to reduce tariffs on $30bn of goods from each country) and "Board of Investment".
- Establishment of a dialogue "to exchange views on risks and benefits related to AI" beginning in November (though neither government appears to have any intent to slow down AI development).
- A reiteration of prior comments that Iran should not have nuclear weapons and tolls should not be collected on international waterways.
- A reiteration that both countries will support and attend the other's hosting of the APEC and G20 meetings respectively.

None of these are a material surprise to expectations; if anything, the two-month truce extension is shorter than expected.

Investors should consider this report as only a single factor in making their investment decision. For Reg AC certification and other important disclosures, see the Disclosure Appendix, or go to www.gs.com/research/hedge.html.

4. Major areas of bilateral disagreement or tension were either mentioned in passing or omitted entirely. The US statement noted "U.S. concerns regarding supply chain shortages related to rare earths and other critical minerals" and "the goal of ensuring shipment levels return to appropriate levels"; neither statement mentioned other export controls or purchase restrictions. Although the Board of Investment was mentioned in the US readout, it was not in China's, and Chinese CEOs did not attend the state dinner – despite a few of them traveling to the US during this period. While the Chinese readout mentioned that Xi "expressed hope that the U.S. side will adhere to the correct position" on Taiwan, the US statement did not mention Taiwan at all.

5. In the coming weeks and months, we are likely to see another 7.5% US Section 301 tariff imposed on China, although the impact on Chinese exports to the US should be relatively small since 15 other economies including the European Union, Japan and South Korea may also face this tariff increase. Since the Chinese government has implied US tariffs can go up to 20% and the previous US Section 301 tariff was 12.5%, additions up to this amount appear unlikely to cause retaliation and escalation on the Chinese side. There may be more details released on agricultural purchases and the tariff reduction on $30bn goods. President Trump is also considering a $14bn arms sale to Taiwan, though this could conceivably be delayed until after the APEC/G20 meetings.

Any third party referenced herein, including any salespeople, traders and other professionals or members of their household, may have positions in the products mentioned that are inconsistent with the views expressed by analysts named in this report.

This research is focused on investment themes across markets, industries and sectors. It does not attempt to distinguish between the prospects or performance of, or provide analysis of, individual companies within any industry or sector we describe.

Any trading recommendation in this research relating to an equity or credit security or securities within an industry or sector is reflective of the investment theme being discussed and is not a recommendation of any such security in isolation.

This research is not an offer to sell or the solicitation of an offer to buy any security in any jurisdiction where such an offer or solicitation would be illegal. It does not constitute a personal recommendation or take into account the particular investment objectives, financial situations, or needs of individual clients. Clients should consider whether any advice or recommendation in this research is suitable for their particular circumstances and, if appropriate, seek professional advice, including tax advice. The price and value of investments referred to in this research and the income from them may fluctuate. Past performance is not a guide to future performance, future returns are not guaranteed, and a loss of original capital may occur. Fluctuations in exchange rates could have adverse effects on the value or price of, or income derived from, certain investments.

Certain transactions, including those involving futures, options, and other derivatives, give rise to substantial risk and are not suitable for all investors. Investors should review current options and futures disclosure documents which are available from Goldman Sachs sales representatives or at https://www.theocc.com/about/publications/character-risks.jsp and https://www.goldmansachs.com/disclosures/cftc_fcm_disclosures. Transaction costs may be significant in option strategies calling for multiple purchase and sales of options such as spreads. Supporting documentation will be supplied upon request.

Differing Levels of Service provided by Global Investment Research: The level and types of services provided to you by Goldman Sachs Global Investment Research may vary as compared to that provided to internal and other external clients of GS, depending on various factors including your individual preferences as to the frequency and manner of receiving communication, your risk profile and investment focus and perspective (e.g., marketwide, sector specific, long term, short term), the size and scope of your overall client relationship with GS, and legal and regulatory constraints. As an example, certain clients may request to receive notifications when research on specific securities is published, and certain clients may request that specific data underlying analysts' fundamental analysis available on our internal client websites be delivered to them electronically through data feeds or otherwise. No change to an analyst's fundamental research views (e.g., ratings, price targets, or material changes to earnings estimates for equity securities), will be communicated to any client prior to inclusion of such information in a research report broadly disseminated through electronic publication to our internal client websites or through other means, as necessary, to all clients who are entitled to receive such reports.

All research reports are disseminated and available to all clients simultaneously through electronic publication to our internal client websites. Not all research content is redistributed to our clients or available to third-party aggregators, nor is Goldman Sachs responsible for the redistribution of our research by third party aggregators.
