Q3 preview: The China market appears stable ahead of policy implementation

Our recent investor conversations suggest a sentiment recovery towards the China medtech sector, especially amid the relatively weak performance of broader China equities. On fundamentals, we forecast a median of 9%/6% YoY revenue/NP expansion among our covered A-share companies, compared with +11%/-19% YoY changes in Q226. Overall, we see a relatively stable China market in Q326 prior to the likely implementation of major policies in late 2026/Q127. That said, we expect sustained divergence across segments and companies in Q326 earnings. For medical equipment, we anticipate meaningful YoY top-line growth following improved procurement activities in China (up 6% in Q326 versus down 12% in both Q1/Q226) on strengthened funding support. That said, fierce price competition and rising raw material costs may pressure GPM. For medical consumables, the momentum for high-growth categories remains solid, while relatively commoditised categories may continue to be squeezed. We highlight a likely strong growth momentum for PFA consumables in Q326. Per our recent channel check on China's PFA procedure trends, the procedure volumes in China reached 40k in 9M26 and look on track to exceed 50k/100k in 2026/2027. For IVD, we estimate modest market growth in Q326 despite minor risks from distributors' destocking or cautiousness in order placement ahead of the test price reform.

What to watch for in Q426

For the domestic market, we think policy developments remain the key source of uncertainty for the sector, with IVD test price unification, medical equipment VBP and DRG3.0 as the three most consequential initiatives, in our view. For IVD test price unification, we expect provinces to announce new test prices in October for implementation in Q127. A recent media report suggests that Beijing has issued its new test prices to hospitals for consultation, with milder-than-feared erosion to current test prices. However, investors should refrain from extrapolating Beijing's proposed prices to other regions at this stage, in our view. For medical equipment VBP, several provinces recently announced provincial VBP plans, and we identified variations in product scope across these programmes. While we expect VBP implementation to have a negative impact on market size over the medium to long term, the deadline for each province to complete one round of provincial VBP by end-2026 could potentially boost procurement activity in Q426. For DRG3.0, we believe the scheduled implementation by March 2027 could facilitate the penetration of innovative technology and clinically differentiated products. In contrast, the demand for some commoditised products may continue to be squeezed. For the overseas market, we believe investors should monitor the potential impact of renewed Middle East tensions involving Saudi Arabia and Iran on shipments and raw material/component costs. We also expect lingering FX headwinds, though the impact may gradually diminish.

APT Medical as A-share top pick; sentiment recovery for Mindray and SNIBE

Our China medtech coverage trades at a median of 21.9x/1.7x 2027E PE/PEG. We update estimates for five companies and keep ratings unchanged.APT Medical/ Angelalign are still our top picks. For APT, we forecast 23%/27% YoY top-/bottom-line growth in Q3, among the highest in our A-share coverage. We also note improving investor sentiment for Mindray/SNIBE. While we have relatively conservative estimates for their Q3 results (+1%/-8% revenue/profit changes for Mindray; 3%/5% revenue/ profit growth for SNIBE), we expect investors to look beyond Q3 if the average price cut from China's IVD test fee unification is milder than feared (20-30% per consensus).

Source: Visible Alpha, UBS estimates. Note: Data as of 16 October 2026; *revenue in US$ m.

Mindray (300760.SZ, Buy)

For Q326, we forecast the company's total revenue to expand modestly by 1% YoY but NP to decline 8% YoY from a relatively high base in Q325. By region, we expect a stable expansion in overseas markets, albeit with a likely lingering FX impact. For the China market, we think the emerging businesses, especially APT Medical, are likely to deliver decent revenue growth, and the IVD business to see stable sales expansion on the back of market share gain. Meanwhile, the ongoing channel destocking may continue to pressure the equipment business. With respect to IVD test price unification, while the company is aware of the media report on the new test prices in Beijing, it does not rule out the possibility that the prices have not been finalised yet. Also, the company has limited visibility on whether other provinces will follow suit and introduce new test prices that imply modest price cuts. Regarding its Hong Kong listing, the company is targeting a potential approval from the China Securities Regulatory Commission by year-end 2026. In terms of outlook, the company guided for positive growth in China revenue and double-digit growth in overseas sales in 2026. Meanwhile, it is likely to see largely flattish profit in 2026F versus 2025, mainly dragged by FX losses. For 2027, it guided for double-digit sales growth and targets flattish GPM versus 2026 despite downside risks.

We raise our revenue forecasts for APT Medical but revise down our revenue estimates for PMLS and MIS segments. Net-net, our 2026/27E EPS decline by 1.8%/1.4% vs. previously. Our DCF-derived price target nudges down from Rmb216.00 to Rmb215.00 (7.5% WACC and 3.0% TGR unchanged), implying 28.1x 2027E PE. We reiterate our Buy rating.

United Imaging (688271.SH, Buy)

We forecast Q326 total revenue/NP to increase by 18%/21% YoY. In Q326, we note robust momentum in procurement for United Imaging's products in China (link), with the tender value rising a significant 39% YoY versus 9%/24% in Q126/Q226. With respect to equipment VBPs, while many provinces are still drafting their VBP plans, the company believes provincial-level VBPs are likely to cover only select products rather than a wide range of products. This is because VBPs may not be able to cater to the differing demand of hospitals in many cases. For products likely to be covered by provincial-level VBPs, such as radiotherapy devices, MRI and CT scanners, the company expects a roughly 10% erosion in ex-factory prices. That said, it will make efforts to mitigate the potential impact on gross margin. For the full-year 2026 outlook, the company has guided for 20%/50% total/overseas revenue growth YoY. In addition, with cost controls and likely smaller FX headwinds in H226F, it expects meaningful NPM improvements in 2026 versus H126. Beyond 2026, the company has an ESOP that targets a 20% revenue CAGR over 2025-28.

We revise up the estimates of FX losses magnitude in H226E, leading to a 2.6% drop in 2026E EPS vs. previously. Meanwhile, we tweak our selling and R&D expense ratios in Q326E. Our DCF-derived price target remains Rmb146.00 (7.3% WACC and 3.0% TGR unchanged), implying 2027E PE/PEG of 49.8x/2.6x. We maintain our Buy rating.

New Industries (300832.SZ, Buy)

We estimate the company's total revenue/NP to edge up 3%/5% YoY in Q326. We are relatively conservative in our forecasts mainly due to China's upcoming IVD test fee unification and the continued FX impact. For the China business, given relatively low visibility on potential cuts to reagent prices, we expect distributors to remain cautious when placing orders. Regarding the media report on the new test prices in Beijing, the company foresees very limited erosion to existing prices. Specifically, there is no proposed price cut for the majority of immunoassay tests, albeit a proposed 30-40% price cut for infectious diseases tests. That said, we await the new test prices from other provinces to determine whether the average price cuts nationwide are milder than feared. With respect to the 2026 outlook, the company has guided for 10-15% sales expansion YoY, on the back of 15-20%/5-10% growth overseas/ domestically. That said, we flag downside risks due to potential shipment delays to destinations such as Saudi Arabia, which represents 5-10% of the company's overseas revenue. In terms of profit, the company estimated a roughly 38% NPM (excluding FX impacts) with GPM improvement and opex control. For 2027, it expects revenue to rise 10-15% YoY, mainly driven by 15-20% revenue growth overseas.

We lower the estimates for the sales volume of IVD reagent in 2026E given 1) potential cautiousness for distributors to place orders prior to the implementation of IVD test price unification and 2) likely shipment delays for the Middle East. In addition, we anticipate larger FX losses for H226E than before. As a result, our 2026/27E EPS decrease by 4.0%/4.1% vs. previously. Our DCF-derived price target declines from Rmb65.90 to Rmb64.30 (7.3% WACC and 3.0% TGR unchanged), implying 25.3x 2027E PE. We reiterate our Buy rating.

APT Medical (688617.SH, Buy)

We estimate the company's total revenue/NP to rise 23%/26% YoY in Q326 with likely robust growth momentum across key segments such as electrophysiology, coronary access and peripheral vascular intervention. According to our recent channel check with an expert with over 18 years of sales/marketing experience in medtech industry, pulsed field ablation (PFA) procedure volumes have been ramping up quickly in China. In 9M26, PFA procedure volumes reached 40k, accounting for about 20% of total atrial fibrillation (AFib) procedures, as per the expert. For 2026/2027, the expert expects PFA procedure volumes in China to exceed 50k/100k. Following PFA's likely inclusion in the Fujian Alliance VBP, which the expert expects to be launched by year-end 2026 and implemented in 2027, PFA procedures may account for over 60% of total AFib procedures over time, according to the expert. As one of the leaders in China's PFA market, APT looks well positioned to capture the growth opportunities from rapidly increasing procedure penetration, in our view. In terms of company outlook, it has an ESOP in place, with one of the vesting criteria being 23%/20% revenue CAGRs over 2025-27 for Cohort A/B ESOP recipients, respectively. For 2026, management reiterates its confidence in delivering 14-15k PFA procedures in 2026, with potential upside to 16k under a stable macro environment. For margins, the company expects flat GPM/NPM in 2026 versus 2025, with a slight increase in selling/R&D expense ratios but a flattish admin expense ratio versus 2025.

Following our recent channel checks, we raise our PFA procedure volume assumptions and increase APT's market share in the PFA segment. We also lower our selling and R&D expense ratio forecasts, reflecting improved operating efficiency and greater scale benefits. Consequently, our 2026/27E EPS rise 3.2%/5.1% vs. previously. Our DCF-derived price target increases from Rmb306.00 to Rmb322.00 (6.8% WACC and 3.0% TGR unchanged), implying a 2027E PE/PEG of 37.1x/2.3x. We reiterate APT Medical as our top pick among A-share medtech companies.

Yuyue Medical (002223.SZ, Buy)

For Q326, we forecast the company's total revenue/NP to increase by 7%/8% YoY. In this quarter, we expect solid expansion in the overseas business and the domestic online business, a modest recovery in its domestic offline business and a largely stable in-hospital business. In Q326, the company's semi-automated external defibrillator and ambulatory wrist blood pressure monitor obtained medical device registration certificates in China. For the 2026 outlook, management targets double-digit revenue growth YoY, mainly driven by accelerating overseas revenue expansion in H226 versus H126 and double-digit growth in domestic online sales. For 2027, the revenue growth could potentially accelerate vs. 2026, according to the company. However, management emphasises that the next 2-3 years will likely remain an investment cycle, and the company will prioritise market share gains and scale expansion over profitability.

Given intensifying competition, we lower our GPM estimates across segments for 2026-27E. Moreover, we lift the selling expense ratio forecasts in the same period to reflect the resources needed to support new product launches. As a result, our 2026/27E EPS decline by 10.0%/13.8% vs. previously. Our DCF-derived price target declines from Rmb36.80 to Rmb35.00 (8.1% WACC and 3.0% TGR unchanged), implying 27.4x 2027E PE. We maintain our Buy rating.

Weigao (1066.HK, Buy)

We estimate the company's revenue/NP to increase by 3%/13% YoY in H226. In September 2026, the company completed the acquisition of Weigao Blood Purification (WBP), increasing its ownership stake to 52.4% and consolidating WBP into its financial statements. With respect to the 2026 outlook, the company forecasts 3-5% YoY sales expansion, driven by pharma packaging/blood management/medical device (up 8-9%/5%/3-5% YoY) but partially offset by orthopaedics/interventional products (down 2-3%/ slight decline). By region, overseas revenue could potentially expand 7-8% while domestic revenue could edge up 2-3% YoY in 2026. At the profit level, it expects slightly declining/flattish recurring profit (excluding FX impacts) on a standalone basis, albeit a 10-15% profit decline on a reported basis. Taking the WBP acquisition into account, management targets consolidated profit of over Rmb1.3bn in 2026.

Our SOTP-based price target of HK$4.80 implies 11.9x 2027E PE. We maintain our Buy rating.

Angelalign (6699.HK, Buy)

For H226, we expect 19% YoY revenue growth, driven by strong overseas expansion (up 37% YoY) and a steady performance in China (up 5% YoY). For sales of aligners in China, we assume case shipment growth of 20% YoY and an ASP decline of 12% YoY in H226; for overseas aligners, we estimate 31% shipment growth and 9% ASP growth. For 2026, we forecast 350,000 (up 27% YoY)/350,000 (up 37% YoY) case shipments in China/overseas, consistent with guidance. For profit, we expect an operating loss of US $2m in H226 on increased overseas expenses. In terms of policy updates, the national alliance renewal VBP for dental implants and orthodontic medical consumables formally commenced on 28 September, with hospital volume reporting and bidding expected by the procurement office by end-2026. We view the bid results as a key catalyst to watch, as both the magnitude of price reductions and volume allocation could reshape Angelalign's domestic growth and pricing outlook.

Our HK$114.00 price target is based on a DCF methodology (13.0% WACC and 3.0% TGR unchanged), implying 80x/47x 2026E/2027E PE and 5.2x/4.4x 2026E/2027E P/S. We maintain Angelalign as one of our top picks in the China medtech sector.

MGI Tech (688114.SH, Neutral)

We expect the company’s total revenue to grow by a low-teens percentage in Q326. On the bottom line, a gradual ramp-up of reagent consumption and continuing operating efficiency improvements could drive NP to break even in Q326, in our view. We note the company's continued progress in enhancing product competitiveness, expanding its global reach and strengthening collaboration with downstream partners. For the full year, we expect 14% revenue growth, driven by low-teens percentage growth in the "Seq-all" segment, low-single-digit percentage growth in the Generative Lab Intelligence (GLI) business and rapid growth in the multi-omics business. Over the longer term, we believe AI drug discovery could drive incremental demand for MGI's multi-omics business, with applications in target discovery, patient stratification, companion diagnostics and efficacy prediction.

Our DCF-based price target (WACC of 8.7%) is Rmb58.0, implying 7.0x 2027E P/S.

Lepu Medical (300003.SZ, Neutral)

For Q326, we expect the company's total revenue to grow by 11% YoY and NP to remain flattish (0% YoY). In this quarter, MWN110 (ActRIIA/B mAb) received NMPA IND approval in July 2026 and FDA IND clearance in September 2026. The company expects its PDRN and PLLA-HA injections to launch in Q426. In terms of the 2026 outlook, we have limited visibility although management provided some qualitative guidance, including: 1) medical device revenue may remain broadly in line with Q226 amid ongoing VBP implementation; 2) pharma revenue may improve modestly on a sequential basis; and 3) consumer products could see stronger momentum following the PDRN launch.

Our DCF-derived price target of Rmb11.90 (unchanged WACC of 8.4% and TGR of 2.0%) implies 17.6x 2027E PE. We have a Neutral rating on Lepu.

Autek China (300595.SZ, Neutral)

Q3 is typically the peak season for OK lenses. However, we expect only mild volume growth and potential ASP pressure this year, given weak demand and intensifying competition. On the policy front, investors have been focused on the new 2026 regulation issued by China's National Health Commission (NHC), which updates the regulatory framework for OK lens fitting and further medicalises the fitting process. According to the company, the new policy allows ophthalmology clinics to provide OK lens fitting services without requiring Grade II or above hospital qualifications, which could increase the number of eligible fitting institutions. A broader provider base could, in turn, intensify competition and put further pressure on pricing. That said, as the policy was only recently implemented, the company did not observe any meaningful impact during this year's summer peak season.

Our price target of Rmb11.60 is derived from DCF (10.2% WACC and 2.5% TGR unchanged) methodology, implying 2027E PE of 20.2x. We have a Neutral rating.

Sonoscape (300633.SZ, Neutral)

We expect the company's total revenue to rise 7% YoY and NP to turn positive YoY in Q326 (Rmb22m in Q326 versus net losses of Rmb14m in Q325). The company highlighted that its domestic ultrasound and endoscopy tender values maintained positive YoY growth in June-August 2026. Based on our analysis (link), Sonoscape's Q326 tender value grew 26% YoY, notably higher than that in Q126/Q226 (9%/9% YoY). Regarding the policy impacts, management highlighted that the implementation of equipment VBP is likely to accelerate import substitution, potentially benefiting leading domestic companies. In addition, anti-corruption measures may postpone procurement demand into Q426. On the 2026 outlook, the company guides for roughly 15% YoY revenue growth, GPM no lower than the H126 level and 15% NPM, with limited FX losses in H226F. We believe guidance may be challenging to achieve.

Our Rmb21.90 price target is derived from a DCF methodology (8.2% WACC and 3.0% TGR), implying 2027E PE/PEG of 34.0x/1.1x. We have a Neutral rating.

Eyebright (688050.SH, Neutral)

We expect the key IOL business to remain subdued in Q3, as ongoing channel destocking and distributor wait-and-see sentiment ahead of the new VBP round continue to weigh on sales, although channel inventory has improved from H126 levels. The consolidation of Delta Medical has also diluted product mix and weighed on NPM. With the new VBP round expected around the end of September or October, investors seem primarily focused on the magnitude of potential further IOL price cuts and their implications for volume recovery and margins.

Our price target of Rmb40.00 is derived from a DCF methodology (9.3% WACC and 2.5% TGR unchanged), implying 2027E PE of 18.7x. We have a Neutral rating.

MicroPort MedBot (2252.HK, Buy)

The trading of MicroPort MedBot's stock remains suspended, along with three other Hong Kong-listed companies in the MicroPort group, due to the need for additional time to assess lease-related matters and their impact on the companies' financial statements. The publication of its H126 results is pending the resolution of these matters and the resumption of stock trading. For the laparoscopic surgical robot bids in China, we identify 47 wins in 9M26, a 9.6% YoY decline. However Q3 saw a meaningful QoQ growth to 24 from 13 in Q226, and Medbot won 10 bids in 9M26 (up 25% YoY) with six in Q326 (versus three in Q226). This brought MedBot's share to 21.3% in 9M26 (13% in both 2024/2025), indicating that its operations are broadly on track. In addition, we note that the number of domestic products grew 36.4% YoY to 30, with a market share of 63.8%, in contrast to tracked imported products, which declined from 30 in 9M25 to 17 in 9M26.

Valuation Method and Risk Statement

We value China medtech based on DCF and SOTP methodologies. We believe risks facing China's medtech industry include: 1) larger-than-expected price reductions and smaller-than-expected market share gains from medical device VBP programs; 2) weaker-than-expected demand from equipment renewal programs; 3) a greater-than-expected impact from the anti-corruption drive; 4) geopolitical risks affecting the supply chain of medical device products; and 5) slower-than-expected product R&D and technological breakthroughs.

Investing in structured investments involves significant risks. For a detailed discussion of the risks involved in investing in any particular structured investment, you must read the relevant offering materials for that investment. Structured investments are unsecured obligations of a particular issuer with returns linked to the performance of an underlying asset. Depending on the terms of the investment, investors could lose all or a substantial portion of their investment based on the performance of the underlying asset. Investors could also lose their entire investment if the issuer becomes insolvent. UBS does not guarantee in any way the obligations or the financial condition of any issuer or the accuracy of any financial information provided by any issuer. Structured investments are not traditional investments and investing in a structured investment is not equivalent to investing directly in the underlying asset. Structured investments may have limited or no liquidity, and investors should be prepared to hold their investment to maturity. The return of structured investments may be limited by a maximum gain, participation rate or other feature. Structured investments may include call features and, if a structured investment is called early, investors would not earn any further return and may not be able to reinvest in similar investments with similar terms. Structured investments include costs and fees which are generally embedded in the price of the investment. The tax treatment of a structured investment may be complex and may differ from a direct investment in the underlying asset. UBS and its employees do not provide tax advice. Investors should consult their own tax advisor about their own tax situation before investing in any securities.

Important Information About Sustainable Investing Strategies: Sustainable investing strategies aim to consider and incorporate environmental, social and governance (ESG) factors into investment process and portfolio construction. Strategies across geographies approach ESG analysis and incorporate the findings in a variety of ways. Incorporating ESG factors or sustainable investing considerations may inhibit the portfolio manager's ability to participate in certain investment opportunities that otherwise would be consistent with its investment objective and other principal investment strategies. The returns on a portfolio incorporating ESG factors or sustainable investing considerations may be lower or higher than portfolios where ESG factors, exclusions, or other sustainability issues are not considered by the portfolio manager, and the investment opportunities available to such portfolios may differ.
